MIKE GIBBONS TO START FOR BOSTON TODAY

By RINGSIDE.
Mike Gibbons, the sensational St. Paul boxer who knocked out Jim Perry in Pittsburgh last night, will start for Boston today in order to begin training for his fourth round bout with Joe White, which takes place at the Allen A. A. next Tuesday night.

Gibbons is not leaving the North Boston middleweight camp as he was last night. "Young" Mike Gibbons has ten rounds in New York, and has a high opinion of the boxing ability and cleverness of White, who will have an advantage of eight pounds over the St. Paul boxer. Gibbons is just as good as 148 pounds as he is at a higher weight, and as the weight is 142 pounds at 3 o'clock, it is safe to say that White will gain fairly before entering the ring.

Joe White has made a good record since he started boxing three years ago. White made an start in the minor ranks at the Albany A. A. He won his three bouts in the 125-pound class. White only weighed 110 pounds at that time. He then started boxing professional bouts, winning five in the featherweight, lightweight and middleweight class. He has now graduated into the middleweight division.

White has had nearly sixty contests, winning fifteen by knockout, twenty on decisions, losing two bouts on close decisions, and has lost thirteen draws. He feels he will bring a surprise on Monday next Tuesday evening, as he intends to carry the sailing to Gibbons from the start.

Frank Mack and Terry Brown, who trained the sensational bout of eight rounds, are expected to furnish a third fight.

By L. R. MURDOCH.
After giving the Brooklyn Dodgers a striking two-run victory yesterday, the Pilgrims might be in a trim to show them some baseball in the two acts to be staged today at Fenway Park.

These two things may bring James a chance to show some strikeouts for the Pilgrims, who have been in a trim to show them some baseball in the two acts to be staged today at Fenway Park.

EXETER TRACK
TEAM FAVORITE
OVER ANDOVER

ANDOVER, May 30.—Many graduates and visitors of students of Andover and Exeter are here today for the nineteenth annual dual track and field meet this afternoon. Exeter runs a slight favorite, but the Andover boys expect a victory.

Exeter will bring a well-known team to this town for the meet, composed of athletes that have shown great form in the indoor and outdoor season, and they are confident that they will be able to pile up a big score.

Moreno Wants Bouts.

Tony Moreno of Roxbury has returned here after a successful trip to New York and Philadelphia. He is under the management of Tom Maher and is seeking bouts with the visiting 125-pound boxer.

Leo Houck Winner
Over Buck Crouse

LANCASTER, Pa., May 30.—Leo Houck demonstrated here that having an accident, he is a better man in the ring than Buck Crouse, whom he met before in Pittsburgh and Boston.

Both men were wary of each other and fought carefully and both did not much like the thought of Crouse's hand.

Brooklyn Dodgers
Insured for $410,000

NEW YORK, May 30.—Charles H. Roberts, owner of the Brooklyn National League team, has taken out an accident insurance policy for $410,000, covering officials and players.

Mr. Roberts said that the policy was taken out to protect the owners of the club and the fans who support the team.

Mike Gibbons Wins
Bout By Knockout

PITTSBURGH, May 30.—Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul welterweight, knocked out Pittsburgh boxer by putting a lightning blow on Jim Perry, a veteran battler of his class. In the second round Perry was knocked out by Gibbons.

The fight was a very close one, but Gibbons was the victor in the end.

If You Like Beer
Drink PFAFF'S

Many people who like beer for its food and tonic properties are not quite sure of just the beer that is best. There are many beers that are well brewed and pure. We doubt, however, if there is any beer that is so uniformly excellent as PFAFF'S.

This excellence consists in choicest ingredients—brewed under ideal conditions by brew masters who know how.

The only sure way to know about PFAFF'S BEER is to try it yourself.

600 ATHLETES IN BIG COLLEGE MEET CORNELL AND PENN RULE FAVORITES

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

(Quarter-Mile Champion of United States and Canada.)

Six hundred of the finest athletes in the country are gathered in Boston to take part in the great intercollegiate championships which will be held in the Harvard Stadium this afternoon and tomorrow.

An enormous crowd is expected at the stadium today. Tomorrow will be the blue ribbon day, however, for the finals in the different events will be held. The one race that is attracting the attention of the entire sporting public throughout the country is the one mile event in which Jones and Tabor will face each other. Although many other marvellous athletes are entered in today's contests and tomorrow's finals, they will receive little attention.

Coast Athletes Here.
The Pacific coast athletes, who arrived in town yesterday, are confident that they will receive a share of the honors offered for the finest exhibition of speed and brawn. They have tried out the Harvard Stadium and think it is one of the best.

of the greatest tracks that they have ever seen. There is an uncertainty about the meet this year owing to the general all round strength of the different colleges. This gives an added interest to the entry of this team from the Coast. Little attention is being given to the performance which the Coast team have achieved during the past few months for athletes from the West, who have come East to perform in the past, usually showed up miserably in close competition. Walter Christie is positive that his chances will prove an exception to the rule. The records of the men will command respect in any company and if the University of California lives up to its reputation, Penn and Cornell will have all they can do to hold up their heads.

Dartmouth Has Star Men.
The Dartmouth track team has eight new men. This is the largest team that has ever left Hanover for an intercollegiate meet. Harry Wilson, the former New York C. track star, who is regarded Dartmouth, would make no predictions as regards the outcome of the meet. He is hoping that his team will gain the victory in this position. He will have the services of several good athletes, particularly Whipple, Knickerbocker and Wright, all members of last year's Olympic team.

Whipple will be one of the strongest competitors in the shot put. He has put the shot over forty feet in his best trial this spring. This will entitle him to at least second place.

The only athlete in intercollegiate circles who is able to defeat the Dartmouth star in Boston, who will represent Columbia University. Reilly was the winner of this event last year and has shown wonderful form as a weight man, but he is a new man this season.

Wright in Pole Vault.
Wright is the holder of the world's record for the pole vault and has done better than twelve feet this season. He will meet Wagner, the Yale star, this afternoon in the trial.

Wright was an entrant in the high jump at Stockholm and is sure to clear him in this event. He is also a member of the team in another athlete who is able to surprise the spectators in the hammer throw, as he made next to nothing last year.

Cable Sues to Score.
Harvard will look to Cable, the colored athlete, to uphold the honor of his college.

NORFOLK
NORFOLK'S NEW ARROW COLLAR

He has the greatest chance of any athlete who will wear the colors of Harvard to score first place, for he should be able to repeat again this year in the hammer throw. Jackson, the entry of this team from the Coast, who has a chance to win the low hurdle event for, with a trial of Michigan, Wendell of Wesleyan and Butler of Yale entered, he will have one of the fastest dashes yet entered in the college circuit to compete against.

Moffet should place in the high jump while Barrett, if he runs true to his past form, should come near winning the quarter mile run.

The trials to all events but the mile and two mile runs will be held this afternoon. They will not have to run long, but in any event they will be a good show. They should qualify in this race for tomorrow.

Golf Notes
By H. P. FARRINGTON.

Loring Lee of Worcester, a young golfer who plays in the east states, is leaping into the limelight. He is said to have left his golf club at home last year, the day before the Springfield annual tournament, he secured a 70, which broke the amateur record for the course, and, if my memory serves me right, he failed to qualify in the first flight this year.

With "Heddie" Schmidt and S. K. Stone leading the hitting order among the Massachusetts golfers at present, it may be well that the former will not be asked to defend his right to the State amateur title. If both players were on hand and in separate halves of the draw, it would not be an impossible feat for them to work through to the final, and have the championship of Worcester run to a sort of secondary feature to the State championship.

"Let Go Yer Zibbaldyards," one of Stone Lee's favorite pieces, was heard not long ago at Boston, where he spends what time he can at his favorite sport. With his two daughters and a son-in-law, a very fine mixed foursome can always be made up.

For real rivalry Nantasket Heath of Worcester and H. Lane of Quincy played the list of players in Massachusetts. The former says "Electric won't beat me but once in his life," and the latter says "I am a very popular man of being 'No' in my life." Sort of a comedy when both men have reputations for veracity that cannot be assailed.

G. A. Wake keeps up his golf winter and summer, regardless of conditions. He played throughout the winter on the Boston course, specializing at Westchester, which always remains in good shape through the winter months. Mr. Wake had promised to pay the round of winter and the summer, and the good supply of golf left little to be desired here in Boston.

Miss Osgood and Miss Curtis Meet

When Miss F. C. Osgood and Miss Margaret Curtis, the flatter in the annual championship of the Boston Women's Golf Association, left the first two at the Valley Country Club this morning, a large gallery crowded out to follow the match.

These women experts have long been recognized as two of the leading players of the country. Miss Curtis having held the national women's title and Miss Osgood having won the title and honor in every other event of prominence in this country outside of the national.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

THE first time I made a home run, missed Arthur Duvall in the dressing room after the shower had put a stop to the game. "I was going with the crowd," I may not have been the last one I made, but it seems like the last one—I don't make them very often. As was said this I drove the ball into the seats for a home run and next day one of the papers had a cartoon labeled "Duvall's Dream." It showed me running around the bases and up in the clouds were a raft of fishes, gloves, bats, stockings, five pounds of soups, soups, money. But the season is long, Charlie. Don't spend it all yet.

PRESIDENT EMBERS OF THE
Brooklyn Club who is traveling with the team, as usual is not outside these days. He has charge of the team's money. But the season is long, Charlie. Don't spend it all yet.

THE general impression among the Boston "fans" is that the clubs did not display their accustomed game and winning spirit in the ten series here. There is good ground for the belief that McGraw has his work cut out for him to find a win in this series.

STALLING says that Wilson, Col. Ben, the Vanderbilt University result, is coming along nicely in his practice for an official position. The only question is his ability to get. Stallings believes that if he could hit for 200 in would be as good as an ordinary case either on a second or third base. Stallings, great speed, Collins looks as though he could lay off a hundred yards in ten seconds but without exerting himself.

The Vital Suggestion of Memorial Day

For forty-six annual Decoration Days—since 1868—the republic has been accustomed to turn aside from material considerations to refresh its soul with sentiment and patriotism.

No day upon the American calendar is more wholesome in sentiment and more inspiring in suggestion than the 30th of May. It is a day given to memory and patriotism, consecrated to courage and sacrifice, and set to the glory of the heroic virtues of the race.

Catholic indeed is the spirit of the great republic in that it lays the fragrance of the flowers and the laurel of its praise upon its loyal sons who fought to save, and upon its mistaken sons who fought to sever, the indissoluble union of indestructible States.

The spirit of the new republic is magnanimity and its forgiveness is such. It rebuilds and rebuilds the Union. The broken ranks that separated at Sumter, where the first shot was fired, were reunited at Appomattox, where Grant, great in victory, gave back the surrendered sword to Lee, as great in defeat, and under the evergreen sod of remembrance the dead heroes in blue and the dead heroes in gray have commingled in dust as glorious and as fine as the fellowship that now binds their living sons in fraternal and eternal peace.

Timely in message as in remembrance is the celebration of today. It is well that from this brave, bright memorial we should gather assurance to the national heart and send out to the armed camps and muttering monarchies of the Orient the reminder that ours is not more a commercial than it is a martial race.

It is NOT "a nation of shopkeepers" that holds its hopeful isolation between these wide Pacific and Atlantic shores, and calls it splendid because it thinks it safe.

It is a nation of men. THEY WHO KNOW HOW TO BUILD AND PROSPER KNOW ALSO HOW TO FIGHT!

The great republic leads today all nations in the breath and blazon of universal peace. It will be first to welcome as it has been first to advocate disarmament and arbitration. But it must not let the occasion die to recall the fact that in the grim alternative of peace this nation knows how, on land and sea, to bear itself magnificently in war.

These graves, green for half a hundred years, cover the finest soldiery on either side that illustrate the annals of strife. No battles of history made better generals than Sheridan and Jackson and Forrest and Johnson and Sherman and Grant and Lee, or better soldiers than those who fought at Shiloh and the Wilderness. And the heart of Abraham Lincoln viewing from Cemetery Ridge the historic path of Pickett's magnificent charge and of Hancock's magnificent repulse, broke into joint and generous tribute to the inseparable and imperishable valor of American arms.

If the time ever comes the heroic spirit will not be wanting to back the titanic energies of our unconquerable race. And yet no man can doubt that our country is greater and stronger because these men fought. The republic never found itself until the Civil War developed the people and fixed their ideals, and banished forever the spectre of division. The South, out of its ashes and desolation, has come through trial and discipline and the miracle of recuperation to a richer, greater and better South than it would ever have been under the feudal splendors and the princely manners of its old regime.

The North, out of its fiery trial and its splendid sacrifice, has come clarified and glorified as a coherent and definite union. And the soldiers who survived on either side, and the sons of the soldiers, have gathered out of their battles a comradeship that makes life sweeter and kinder than ever before.

Sleeping for four years in blankets under the stars or in the rain, marching through desperate days, hungry at times, and often weary and sad, with their blood and their lives always on the point of their bayonets in the service of that magnificent altruistic sentiment we call "OUR COUNTRY," these splendid Americans learned the devotion, the discipline, the self-denying sacrifice that make men noble and our country great. Out of that mighty conflict of convention came majestic eloquence, and noble music, and heroic art, and fearless invention, and sterling character, and unrivaled patriotism.

"War is hell," said General Sherman, and the aspiration of the Twentieth Century is to peace. Peace is the dream and the ideal of our advancing civilization. In a republic of intelligence no one would ever wish for war.

But in a republic of men, of soldiers and the sons of soldiers, no real man would ever fail to remember that there are causes and principles well worth a war to save—even as our forefathers thought when for their liberty and independence they poured the tea in Boston Harbor and prosecuted the issue to the crowning heights of Yorktown—or as then our immediate fathers thought when for the Union and for freedom they met the issue framed at Sumter and pressed it to their Union forged forever at Appomattox.

THE FIRST MEMORIAL DAY

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

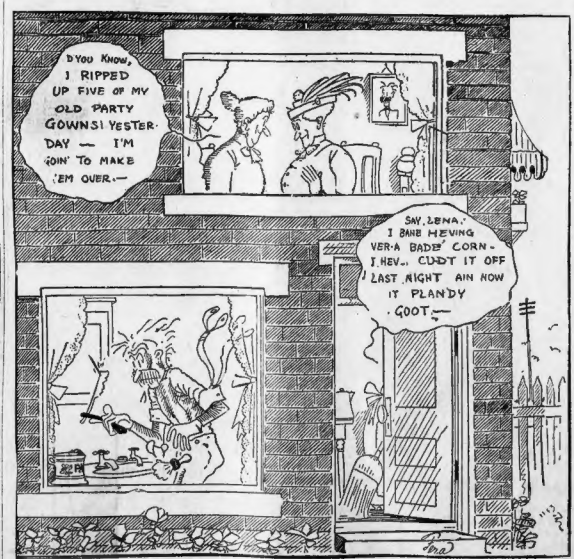

May 30, 1868.
THE first Memorial Day was observed forty-five years ago—May 30, 1868, at Arlington, Virginia.
The origin of the day, according to the best tradition, is as follows: Soon after war broke out a German soldier came to this country, and settling in the Union Army, served through to Appomattox. At the close of the war, this soldier returned to his native land, and he was the custom in Germany to scatter flowers on the soldier's graves once a year; and while nothing more was said at the time, it is generally supposed that this was the origin of Decoration Day.
Early in May, 1868, Adjutant-General Chipman talked with National Commander John A. Logan, of the Grand Army of the Republic, upon the subject, and suggested that fast organizations inaugurate the custom of scattering flowers on the graves of the Union soldiers all over the country at some uniform date. The idea naturally appealed to Logan, and he forthwith issued an order in which he named the Thursday of May, 1868, as the day for the observance of the day.
Accordingly, on that day, at Arlington, the graves of fifteen thousand

"Yon marble minstrel's voiceless tone
In deathless song shall tell
When many a vanished age hath flown
The story how ye fell."

—ON—
Ideal Love in a Man—
The Highest Type of Lover Is at Once
Friend, Mate, Defender and Comrade to the Woman He Loves.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

WHAT is the highest ideal of man's love for woman? It is a more difficult question to answer than its companion—woman's ideal love for man—because woman is a complex being to satisfy in the matter of the affections than man. Given an orderly home, a well-supplied table and a tactful, cheerful woman to reign, and the average man is content with his domestic relations. But emotional woman wants more than these conditions grant. She wants continuous union, a frequently recurring touch of sentiment, and even a misunderstanding, now and then, followed by a reconciliation, is sweeter to her than a monotony of unexpressed satisfaction.

The ideal lover takes into consideration all these peculiarities of feminine temperament and adapts himself to them in a reasonable degree.

Almost every woman, the most ardent and romantic as well as the phlegmatic, realizes at once the material element in her love for a man. It is this which aids her in being his patient nurse hours of illness and his stimulus in times of despondency, and it is that lack of greed and more paternal element in man's love which detracts from its idealism so often.

When he does possess it man is able to overdo the matter and to become the slave of his lady's hysterical moods and to encourage her weaknesses and her selfish whims.

The lover who is at once kind, sympathetic and masterful is seldom found, yet he alone illustrates the highest order of love.

Ideal Lover of Either Sex Is Neither Slave Nor Coward

The ideal lover is he who commands his wife's or sweetheart's respect and admiration, together with her love; who makes her realize that his standards of womanhood and of life are high, and who is capable of drawing a fine line between devotion and servility.

The ideal lover of either sex is neither a slave or a coward. The moment those elements enter into a love its standard is lowered. I once heard a wife say that she would not live with a man who told her he thought another woman was beautiful. And she felt that for her husband's good she should shut his eyes to the beauty of all other women. The man loved his wife, but while his lips were silent on the subject of admiration often bespoke the man's love was not ideal, since it possessed no atom of talent, and made herself only the object of ridicule and pity to all observers, while she left her husband—a good man, of ample means—and her children to languish in the care of domestic help.

Had the woman been a great genius, born to do some special work in the world, the husband's unselfishness would have been "ideal."

Highest Type of Lover Is the Truest Friend a Woman Has

A man must be a woman's true friend in order to be also her ideal lover. He must possess appreciation of all her best qualities, sympathy for all her feminine weaknesses, the courage to warn her when her highest good demands it, and the wisdom to direct her when counsel is needed.

He must be delicate enough never to make her feel her financial dependence upon him, and he must possess the will power and self-control to make his loyalty to her under all conditions that which he expects of her.

Yes, he must be strong enough to keep her from leading him into financial ruin, and love enough to keep her responsible to his demonstrations of affection. Friend, defender, lover, comrade, mate—all these must be he who possesses "the highest type of love" for woman.

A WREATH OF BLUE

By MINNA IRVING

THIS day we stand by the steep slopes
Whose tops from the battle
And dead,
The heroes so dear to the nation.
The army of glorious dead.
And scatter the roses and lilies
And leave not laurels scattered
On the green waving grasses above them.

Remember the Maine.
Let us wear wreaths of forget-me-nots today
A garland of heavenly blue,
Tied up with a red and white ribbon
And jeweled with roses and dew.
Let us cast it abroad on the altars
To "Glorious" sailors' striving hearts.
For our sailors who die at Havana
Remember the Maine.
